

MINOR CROP SESSION:

What Not-To-Do When Producing Garlic

David Stern
Rose Valley Farm
P.O. Box 149, Rose, New York 14542

The production and consumption of garlic has increased 6-fold since 1985 and fits well into the cropping systems (machinery, labor, and marketing), climates, and soils of New York Farms. The keys to success with this labor intensive crop are efficient production and quality marketable bulbs. There are many ways to fail along the way, some of which will be discussed during this talk.